CHINESE MOVE TO GET APPROVAL OF COUNCIL ADVISORS

Ratepayers Vote Cancellation Of Disputed Article In Constitution

HEAVY MAJORITY GIVEN

Nearly All Favor Abrogation Of Clause Objectionable To Council

By a vote of 470 to 42 the Chinese ratepayers of Shanghai, in mass meeting for the first time in the history of the Settlement, yesterday cancelled the article in the Chinese Ratepayers' Association constitution which has been holding up the approval by the Consular body of the recently appointed Chinese advisory committeemen.

The clause in dispute was held by the Municipal Council to fetter the advisors by requiring them to submit all matters under discussion to the general, or business, committee of the Association before decision. The constitution was drafted by a provisional committee previous to the election of the five advisors at a meeting of the ratepayers at the Y.M.C.A. on October 14.

On the strength of its own interpretation of the clause, the Council formally addressed its objection to the Chinese Chamber of Commerce, which handled the correspondence between the two bodies. As a result, an extraordinary meeting of the Chinese Ratepayers was called by the business committee of the Association for yesterday at the Town Hall.

DR. WONG PRESIDED

Promptly at three o'clock, Dr. C. T. Wang took the chair and gave a brief history of the inauguration of the Ratepayers' Association, the formation of the business committee and the election of the five advisors who were created by the foreign ratepayers' meeting last April.

He pointed out it had been the wish of the Chinese ratepayers to see their advisors assume office at an early date, so it was imperative that a decision be reached as to whether or not the article in question should stand. The business committee, of which he is the head, had no power to cancel or amend the article which was adopted by a general meeting and he invited a discussion on how to deal with the regulation.

Mr. David Z. T. Yui, one of the members of the drafting committee, after explaining the idea of including this article in the constitution, discussed the reasons for its existence. The Council believed that the existence of the clause would tie the hands of the advisors, he said, because instead of five advisors, the Council will actually have the 27 members of the business committee, who could dictate to the five advisors.

Whatever construction might be placed upon the meaning of the article, Mr. Yui stated, it was the aim of the drafting committee merely to enable the business committee to assist and co-operate with the advisors and not to hinder their work.

ADVOCATES CANCELLATION

The arguments against the cancellation include the objection to foreign interference in the inner workings of the association, objection to the Council's attempt to restrict the voice of the Chinese and undesirability of yielding by the ratepayers when a demand is made by the Council, Mr. Yui said. But Mr. Yui considered these insufficient to warrant the existence of the clause, because, he said, the power of cancelling the article still rested with the Chinese, since, from all indications, the Council was not likely to restrict the voice of the Chinese unreasonably and because the Council had assured the association that as soon as the article in question was cancelled, the names of the advisors would be submitted to the Consular Body for approval. To cancel the article was a comparatively small matter and he expressed the opinion that it might well be left out of the Constitution.

Mr. Tsao Mo-kwan of the Shaohsin Guild spoke at great length in favor of cancellation; exceeding the time limit for speaking because he claimed that he represented a large number of Shaohsinese at the meeting. Mr. S. K. Tsao of the Y. M. C. A. questioned the competency of any ratepayer representing a large number of others, the chairman supporting his contention.

Mr. Chang Han-chi of the Foochow Road Street Union besides favoring cancellation of article six, proposed the abolition of the business committee, which, he said, would have no functions to

STEVENS ADVISED NOT TO CONTRACT LOANS TO PEKING

Students And Organisation Union Deny Opposition Against Consortium

Denying that there is any opposition against the new Consortium and its principles, the China National Students' Federation and the National Organisation Union yesterday addressed a letter to Mr. Fredrick W. Stevens, representative of the American Group of the Consortium, urging him and his colleagues not to lend any money to the Central Government for the present.

The message pointed out that if the administration fails to get any money from the foreign and Chinese bankers, union of the North and the South will take place shortly. Otherwise internal strife will be prolonged.

The text of the letter is as follows:

"In reading over your statement of the 25th of February, we note that you are worrying about a general opposition in the country against the consortium, which, we believe, is a misconception. The present popular sentiment in China is really in favor of the new consortium and its principles. The accounts and arguments given in your statement are quite true and would receive the approval of practically every Chinese.

"It would be of interest to find out where this unfounded information comes from. In our opinion, it might be that the Peking government, while disfavoring the proposal of foreign supervision, invented such so as to stimulate the Chinese Bankers to make loans fast. Let us call your attention that the Peking government is now under the control of corrupted officials and militarists. So long as they remain in their position, there is little hope for China either to reconciliate the North and the South or to make any reformation.

"Right now, all the military lords are stealing the local revenues to enrich themselves. Yet no effective protest has been made by the government. Again, Chang Tso-lin and Tsao Kun are struggling for supremacy, while the government has only taken steps to pacify both of them in order to avoid any conflict. Such a government is unable to reconciliate the North and the South or to try any reforms even though backed with considerable financial support."

Labor Conference Favors Restoration By Loans To Germans

(Reuter's Service)

Amsterdam, April 3.—The conference of the second Labor International has passed a resolution, with the concurrence of the German delegates, in favor of the immediate restoration of the devastated regions by means of international loans which Germany should undertake to repay in thirty annual instalments. The other indemnities it states should be fixed in accordance with Germany's prosperity and with a sliding scale based not only on her exports but also on her internal taxation as compared with other countries.

Greeks Capture Strong Hill After Three Days Of Hard Fighting

(Reuter's Service)

Constantinople, April 3.—A desperate struggle is in progress between the Turkish and Greek forces north of Eskishehr in Anatolia. The Turks hold a strong position between Bozeyuk and Kovalitsa, where they have concentrated their main force of about 20,000, which is well supplied with artillery and ammunition, including several six-inch howitzers which are well served.

The Greek left wing is held up, but the right, after three days' fighting, has captured Kovalitsa Hill and forced back the Turkish left. It is reported that the Greek casualties total 7,000.

Athens, April 2.—M. Gounaris, the leader of the parliamentary majority, has assumed the Greek Premiership vice B. Kalogeropoulog who becomes Minister of Finance.

The King has gone to the front accompanied by his brothers, Princes Nicolas and Andrew.

Paris, April 4.—The Angora Government's delegation in Paris denies the rumors and report from Constantinople to the effect that fighting has occurred between the Turks and French. It declares that the Angora troops have been forbidden to attack the French.

COUNTERFEITERS HERE IMITATING U.S. PAPER MONEY

Fake $20 Note Turned In At American Consulate Yesterday

United States currency is receiving its share of attention from Shanghai's numerous bands of petty counterfeiters. The said attention in the two cases last brought to light is a bit out of the ordinary run of money-making activity.

A two dollar Federal Reserve Bank bill was handed in at the American consulate yesterday by a Chinese who was not too well acquainted with Uncle Sam's monies. It had been "raised" to a twenty. The work was crudely done. It could never deceive an American but it must have been passed more than once in this country, where thousands of kinds of paper are dealt in every day.

Another instance of money faking, was called to attention yesterday by U.S. Postal Agent Everett. Mr. Everett was counting over a big pile of American twenty-five cent pieces, when he came upon a piece, showing liberal traces of a gold wash.

"There's a piece" Mr. Everett said, "that has had a thin gold plate. No one knows how many times it has been passed for an American five-dollar gold piece."

Asked if many such pieces of "queer" money came to his attention, Mr. Everett replied: "They are so numerous as to have lost their interest."

It might pay Americans to examine American money, especially paper and gold, more carefully here than they do at home.

FOUR NATIONS TO WAR ON HUNGARY IF KARL REMAINS

Italy, Jugo-Slavia, Rumania And Czecho-Slovakia Send Ultimatum

MUST LEAVE THURSDAY

Ex-Emperor "Parades In Military Uniform And Shows High Spirits"

(Reuter's Service)

London, April 4.—Reuter's Agency learns that the Little Entente—comprising Italy, Jugo-Slavia, Rumania and Czecho-Slovakia—have sent an ultimatum to the Hungarian Regent, Admiral von Horthy, stating that, unless Karl leaves Hungarian territory by Thursday next, they will begin military operations against Hungary.

(Note.—A Reuter message from Vienna last Thursday stated that, according to the Neues Wiener Journal, 30,000 Jugo-Slav troops were massed at Varasdin, ready to march on Steinamanger in order to prevent the restoration of the Hapsburg monarchy.)

It is pointed out that the Little Entente by no means regards the Karl adventure as a comic opera affair, as it seems to be considered in some quarters, but as a most serious development, involving grave issues for all neighboring states.

Despite the assurances of the Hungarian Government that the arrangements for the deportation of Karl are complete, the ex-Emperor is still at Steinamanger, where he is parading in military uniform, and displaying high spirits.

The enquiry conducted by the Swiss Government into the circumstances connected with Karl's departure from Switzerland implicates Prince Sixtus of Bourbon, who obtained for Karl a Spanish passport under an assumed name.

London, April 2.—The Hungarian National Assembly has passed a resolution declaring that the reentry of the ex-Emperor Karl into Hungary is "a menace to the national sovereignty," calling upon the Government to suppress all attempts to overthrow law and order and thanking the Regent, Admiral Horthy, for "his loyal and patriotic conduct."

The Austrian National Assembly has also passed a resolution stating that it is determined to resist any attempt to overthrow the Republic.

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, April 3.—The Czecho-Slovak Foreign Minister, Dr. Benes, in the course of a statement to the Senate on recent events in Hungary remarked that the tragi-comic adventure of the ex-Emperor Charles was at bottom a serious matter which would not be without grave political results.

Czecho-Slovakia, he said, had manifested a real desire to co-operate with Hungary and had negotiated several questions of great importance, notably regarding the financial regime of Hungary. All of this had been jeopardised through the senseless whim of the ex-King and was replaced by a new threat with regard to Hungary.

Dr. Benes discountenanced the recent attempt in official Magyar circles to treat the question of the Hapsburg succession as a purely domestic one, in contradiction of the decisions taken on two occasions by the Ambassadors' Conference. Czecho-Slovakia, he continued, would do her utmost to secure guarantees aimed at the frustration of any Hapsburg pretensions. The world war, having been fought for the spread of democratic principles, the victory won must not be jeopardised.

U.S. TO SUPPORT ALLIES' DEMAND FOR REPARATION

"Must Accept Guilt For War And Pay" Is Official Attitude

PLAN CUSTOMS BARRIER

Imports From Unoccupied Territory To Pay 25 Percent Tax

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, April 3.—In connection with the rumors, emanating from London, that Germany and the United States are in communication with regard to the question of reparation payments, it is authoritatively stated that the attitude of the United States Government towards Germany is that Germany must accept the responsibility for the war and pay her obligations to the fullest measure of her capacity.

(U. S. Navy Radio through Reuter)

Washington, April 3.—The proponents of immediate peace with Germany are determined to introduce resolutions in Congress at an early date with a view to bringing this about.

Paris, April 3.—A despatch from Washington states that the United States Government has, after an important sitting, issued a statement to the press regarding the international situation.

The United States, says this statement, considers that Germany ought to recognise her moral responsibility and the debts which she has incurred through the war, and that she ought to pay to the limit of her capacity.

"It is ridiculous," it adds, "to assert that after having fought side by side with the Allies during the Great War, we are going to help Germany to elude her moral obligations."

This very definite view is the more worthy of note as it constitutes the new administration's first pronouncement on the subject since its accession to power.

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, April 3.—The Ambassadors' Council has unanimously adopted the report of the Technical Committee embodying the British proposals for a Rhine customs barrier which is to be established within the British zone of occupation in order to facilitate control.

Imports from unoccupied Germany into the Rhineland area will pay a duty equal to twenty-five percent of the German customs, while exports from the Rhineland territory into the unoccupied parts of Germany will only be subject to a statistical duty equivalent to the German duty. The duties on foodstuffs, raw materials and certain manufactures will probably be lowered on the western frontier of the occupied territory in order to ensure the cheap provisioning of the Rhineland, but in this case the excise duty will be raised on the eastern frontier so that the total will equal the import tax on the other German frontiers.

MONGOLS SEIZE MAIMAICHENG; ASK AUTONOMY

Conquerors Independent Of Urga Reactionaries; Will Resist Interference

(Staff Wire To The China Press)

Peking, April 4.—Independent Mongol forces which are not associated with the Urga Government or Baron Ungern, occupied Maimaicheng on March 19 after defeating and driving out the Chinese garrison there. Maimaicheng is a Mongolian border town one mile distant from Kiakhta.

The Chinese troops withdrew into Siberian territory after looting and burning Maimaicheng and killing 60 Russians. The Mongol leader promptly restored peace and order and formed a provisional government upon his entry into the city. His government is independent from that of the Living Buddha and opposed to Baron Ungern's Freebooters.

The Mongol leader has announced that he will not molest Kiakhta where the Far Eastern Republic has one division of well equipped troops. The Mongols in Maimaicheng desire their autonomy on the general basis of the Kiakhta Convention and will resist future attempts by Chinese or any Russian group to interfere with the internal affairs of the Mongols.

Spring Starts On Job Today; Important Chinese Holiday

This Is The Day For Honoring Ancestors And Millions Of Dollars (In Ghost Money) Will Be Burned—Ceremonies In All Temples

The spring season, according to ancient Chinese lore, begins today with the observance of the Tsing Ming Festival, a holiday which almost ranks with the New Year in solemnity and importance.

From the era when the cave man felt a flash of gratitude because the shivering time was over, every tribe and nation has celebrated the return of warmth to the earth and the evidences of new life. Christians spiritualised the festival and called it Easter; the Chinese also deepened its meaning by making it the most important day in the year for the remembrance of the dead. For practically every other people, the celebration of the spring solstice is a time of rejoicing; for the Chinese, it is a period of mourning, sacrifice, and contemplation.

Yesterday pious Chinese observed a day of fasting by eating no cooked food. Today everybody from official to ricsha coolie will seek out the graves of his ancestors to burn incense and ghost money and to make sacrifices of wine and food. Those whose family graves lie in distant provinces will either hold the ceremonies before the ancestral tablets at home, or else go to the Guild Hall of their particular district and perform the duties to the dead among their countrymen.

Early today the streets will be crowded with Chinese going by automobile, carriage, or wheelbarrow to their family graves or to their guild hall mortuary. Members of families in which a death has occurred during the past three years will wear the white robes and head-dresses of mourners. Shanghai being the New York of China in the sense that comparatively few residents are natives, most of the ceremonies will take place in the guild halls of the various provinces, where the coffins of dead members are kept until they can conveniently be sent back to the birthplace of the deceased. Some of the larger guilds also maintain cemeteries for the burial of those who are without families or whose relatives are too poor to pay the cost of transporting the coffin.

Today in the interior of the mortuaries, red candles will flicker and gleam through the dense incense smoke, as crowds of white garbed Chinese pour out libations of wine and wail their chants for the dead. As more than 100,000 coffins are reposing in the mortuary or buried in the grave-yard of the Canton Guild alone, the size of the crowds which will throng these buildings can be faintly imagined.

The ceremony of the day consists in the lighting of candles and incense sticks before the grave or coffin and the setting out of bowls of food for the comfort of the departed spirits. During the lighting of the candles, the mourners kneel and make obeisance by touching their foreheads to the ground. As long as the light continues to flicker, cups are filled with wine for the refreshment of weary ghosts and the relatives continue their signs of reverence, wailing if the death is a recent one. At the end of the ritual, ghost money is burned for the use of the spirit in the next world and the ceremonial wine is poured out on the ground. A greenish dumpling, which may be seen in all the Chinese foodshops today, is made of dough, beans, and chopped leaves and prepared especially as an offering for the dead.

Though the merry tinkle of the coppers and dimes as they hit the till is too musical to the ears of Shanghai Chinese to be muffled, most shops in the interior cities will be closed today, some giving their employes as much as a month's vacation, permitting them to return to the remote corner of Kwangsi or Wansu or Szechuen that covers the bodies of their dead. Schools also close during this period, allowing the teachers to go back to their homes and do the duty that the spirits of their ancestors demand.

Since 1915, however, the ancient Tsing Ming Festival has taken on at least one decidedly modern aspect, having been made a national Arbor Day by presidential mandate from Peking. Every governor and mayor is instructed to set an example to his people by planting a tree in a public place with his own hands. The same duty is supposed to be performed by the President, though this year he has followed the example of American presidents and passed the job on to the Secretary of the Interior. Mayor Shen of the Chinese city will hold a planting ceremony today in Pootung.

Besides the official planting which makes a pleasing ceremony but which promises little in the way of results, there will be a real planting of trees by schoolchildren and Boy Scouts throughout many provinces.

The origin of the Tsing Ming Festival is buried so deep in ancient Chinese history that its beginnings are beyond the reach of written language. "Fifteen days after the equinox of spring, when the handle of the Great Dipper points to the East, comes the pure, clear wind," wrote Huai Nan-tzu, who died in 122 B.C. "The musical note which corresponds to this season is opposed to the Yang principle of nature."

The victory of the Yang principle over darkness and death was symbolised in the days of the dragon rule by the Emperor's sacrifice of a male goat and an offering of broken ice in the ancestral temple. Today, while old China continues to remember it with chants and libations, the younger generation adds a new observance of practical service and unselfish help.

RAIL MEN ON VERGE OF STRIKE IN BRITAIN

Southern Federation In Favor Of Joining Miners

COAL RATIONED

Domestic Supplies Cut To 100 Pounds Weekly Per Family

(Reuter's Service)

London, April 3.—At meetings of transport workers and railwaymen in London and other centers today, speakers strongly favored action in support of the miners, declaring that if the other unions allowed the miners to be beaten they would be attacked and beaten in turn.

Meetings of railwaymen were held at Birmingham, Newcastle, Derby, Romford, Sheffield and Leeds today. The Southern Federation, which represents 100,000 men, passed a resolution in favor of supporting the miners. Most of the resolutions passed that the railwaymen are prepared to support the miners, even to the extent of coming out on strike.

London, April 3.—In consequence of the Miners' Federations' representations, aided in some cases by intimidation, the majority of the pump-men have now withdrawn from the coalmines. A number of the smaller collieries—notably six in South Staffordshire are already permanently ruined, while in Lanarkshire and Fifeshire hope has practically been abandoned.

Sir Robert Horne in appealing for volunteers to man the pumps deserted by the strikers, has voiced the Government's determination to do everything possible to save the mines, and has promised that volunteers will be protected.

The hope hitherto based on the forthcoming conference of the "triple alliance" is discounted by statements from the leaders of the railwaymen and transport workers which are overwhelmingly in favor of giving practical effect to the "triple alliance" for the first time.

The Government's view is understood to be that the country is faced with the gravest national emergency since the declaration of war.

Speaking at Birmingham, Mr. C. T. Cramp, the General Secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, said that if he thought the Triple Alliance were solid he would do his utmost to stop work immediately. It was a heroic thing to lead men into battle but it was foolish to lead them into a ditch. For the success of the strike he said, all means of transport must be stopped.

Orders restricting the consumption of coal have been issued. Domestic supplies are restricted to one hundred weight weekly while the supply of coal for industrial consumption is generally reduced to half the normal.

London, April 3.—The Government has decided that the miners who are out on strike are not entitled to unemployment allowances, on the ground that unemployment arises out of trade disputes.

Two Professors In U.S. Dead In Odd Shooting Affair

(Reuter's Service)

Syracuse, New York, April 2.—A double shooting tragedy has occurred here, the victims being both professors in the business department of Syracuse University. It appears that Professor Holmes Beckwith shot Professor Hermen Wharton with a revolver, and then shot himself, both dying instantly.

The students of the University had recently petitioned for the removal of Professor Beckwith, who is said to have been unpopular. The Chancellor of the University, Dr. Day, has expressed the opinion that Professor Wharton was killed while vainly attempting to prevent Professor Beckwith from committing suicide.

BUSINESS DRAGS IN CHITA; REDS SEIZE HOUSES

"Freedom" An Empty Term, As Communist Chiefs Do All The Thinking

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, April 1.—The following is an extract from the report of the Chinese Official Observer, dated Chita, March 14:

"Though Eastern Zaibaikalia used to be the land of plenty, and strapping peasant girls were wont to bring their farm produce of cooked poultry, fresh butter, cheese, cream, milk and eggs to the stations on the arrival of trains, today nothing can be bought for love or money. The station buffets are closed and so are the boutiques. Even the itinerant hawkers are no longer to be seen. It is not their fault that the few paying travellers must go hungry, for the majority of those who use the railway these days are "locals" and consequently have no money except buffer or Soviet paper notes, which nobody wants. Besides this, there are plenty of hungry soldiers, railway employes, etc., to be found at every station, and therefore the peasants run risks, for empty stomachs often revolt when food is close at hand. This temptation the peasants know well by now and therefore they keep away with their wares. Notwithstanding the shortage of the food supply, which undoubtedly exists with the majority, many of those who have made their homes in this territory of undulating hills and fertile valleys, that forms a natural boundary between Siberia and Mongolia, are rich, for, as we sped along in the Linin we saw hundreds of head of horses and cattle grazing, and farm-houses apparently well-stocked with pigs, sheep and poultry, for in this district live well-to-do Buriats, who apparently have been left alone by both Whites and Reds, who in turn have devastated the country in their insane civil warfare during the past three years.

"We arrived at Chita on a Sunday and there was an unusual number of soldiers to be seen everywhere. For the most part, they were well-dressed, it being evident that they had but recently been served out with new kit. As it was a holiday, all shops were closed, but it was possible to observe that trade here is not in a flourishing state. That there is a shortage of goods of all kinds could be seen by looking in the shop windows of these stores, which still attempt to trade. Many former establishments are closed altogether and have been requisitioned by the Government for living quarters for the employes of the State.

"My first impressions of Chita today were not favorable. Everywhere there is an air of neglect and poverty. This same appearance is visible among the people whom one passes in the streets. They are for the greater part poorly clad and under-fed and therefore look neglected—quite different from the state of affairs which existed before Chita became involved in this civil warfare. Though everybody goes about his business without being interfered with and there is but very little crime existing in Chita, there is really no "freedom," as the Communist leaders wish to make the masses think, for they are no longer their own masters and are even afraid to express their own sentiments.

"The majority of the people are working without wages, for Buffer paper notes are really of no intrinsic value even here, and the free monthly rations they receive are insufficient for anyone doing manual work. Even the soldiers who are looked after better than anyone else, do not get their proper bill and are often forced to beg for a crust of bread. Strangers to the town will find considerable difficulty in getting accommodation, for most of the hotels have been requisitioned whilst all householders have been forced to take in lodgers, quartered by order of the Government, who, though paying nothing, occupy the greater part of the apartments.

Charge Dismissed Against Dr. Hiltner

Defective traffic regulations, in that the right of a motor car to pass a tram-car on the right side is not specifically given or prohibited in the motor-traffic laws, caused the dismissal of the police charge brought against Dr. W. E. Hiltner, by the Municipal Police, in the United States Court for China yesterday before Commissioner F. J. Schuhl.

Dr. Hiltner maintained to the court and to Inspector S. I. Mackenzie, who conducted the case that he was well within his rights when he moved to the right of the standing car, and proceeded on his way. Commissioner Schuhl, in ordering the dismissal of the charge, expressed the view that a regulation should be written to prohibit motor-cars from passing tram-cars that have stopped for passengers to alight.

Chinese Move To Get Approval Of Council Advisors

fulfil after the article had been struck out.

Mr. Wu Tsi-ngo also favored the cancellation.

Mr. Thomas Yui of the Heng Fong Cotton Mill declared that the article in question concerned the relation between the business committee and the advisors and not between the Council and the advisors. The object of the ratepayers was to send their representatives, who are the advisors, to the council, so the existence of the article was of no consequence.

Mr. Chao Nan-kung further endorsed the opinion of Mr. Chang Han-chi in the suggestion to abolish the business committee.

Further argument in favor of the cancellation was advanced by Messrs. Huang Kien-fang of the Fukien Road Street Union, Wang Yuan and Yue Yang-sung of the Federated Street Unions.

Koo Kang-fu, another Street Union representative, vigorously protested against the proposed cancellation of the article, maintaining that the article was the only weapon with which the advisors could function effectively.

Mr. Liu Shou-yu, former division commander of Szechuen, took the same attitude and favored the reservation of the article. He considered yielding on this point to the Council as a serious matter which would open the way to other foreign interference in Chinese affairs. He favored the retention of the business committee.

The number of those present was then taken and found to be 512, of whom 470 voted in favor of the cancellation.

Commission Fixes Waterway Terms

(French Wireless Service)

Paris, April 3.—Advices from Bordeaux state that the Waterways Commission has agreed upon a number of provisions of the international agreement regarding freedom of navigation on waterways of international importance. It will consider later whether it is desirable to apply them, and if so, to what extent, to national waterways.

The internationalisation of a waterway will not imply the establishment of any international administration whatever. The rights of the river States will remain intact and they will not be prevented from coming to an agreement amongst themselves, should they so desire, with a view to establishing a common administration.

Freedom of navigation will be granted to ships and vessels flying the flags of the contracting parties. No exclusive privilege will be granted to companies or private individuals. The mercantile flag of those countries which have no seaport will be recognised, under certain guarantees. Only dues to cover the expenses of the maintenance and improvement of the waterways will be levied. The rights of the States relative to the policing of the waterways, the application of laws or regulations with regard to customs, hygiene, emigration, immigration and contraband will be protected.

Reading In India Gets Warm Welcome

(Reuter's Service)

Bombay, April 2.—Lord Reading, the new Viceroy of India, and Lady Reading have arrived here.

Bombay, April 3.—Lord Reading's reception was one of the finest ever accorded a Viceroy. He was greeted by booming guns and huge cheering crowds.

The Corporation's address of welcome alluded to the ancient race to which the new Viceroy belonged. In reply, Lord Reading said he wondered whether, perhaps, by some fortunate, and almost indefinably subtle subconsciousness, his descent might quicken and facilitate his understanding of the aims and aspirations, joys and sorrows of the Indian people, and assist him to catch the almost inarticulate cries and inaudible whispers of the multitudes, who sometimes suffer most and yet find it difficult, if not impossible, to express their needs.

SINN FEIN VICTIM FOUND MURDERED ON GOLF COURSE

Body Of Unidentified Men Discovered With Note Pinned To Clothes

(Reuter's Service)

London, April 4.—The body of an unidentified man, who had been shot dead, has been found on the golf links at Ashford in Middlesex. A note pinned to the body bore the words "Let spies and traitors beware." This is the first case reported of Sinn Fein vengeance in England. The note was signed: "Irish Republican army."

London, April 3.—A remarkable series of attempted incendiary outrages occurred at Manchester in the early hours of yesterday morning. Four men were detected by a policeman in the act of trying to set fire to a warehouse. Thereupon they shot and wounded the policeman and then decamped.

Subsequently the employes of an hotel and cafe were held up by men with revolvers, who set fire to the premises. The outbreak was, however, quickly extinguished. Outbreaks at two other hotels were perpetrated by the occupants of bed-rooms, who had sprinkled petrol on the stairs and walls. In these cases, too, the flames were soon subdued.

Four hundred shop-windows at Liverpool were found to have been scratched with glass-cutters during the night and seriously damaged. All these outrages are believed to have been the work of Sinn Feiners.

London, April 3.—The policeman who was shot in Manchester yesterday has died. The police while searching for suspects raided a club where they were met by a fusilade, wounding two of them. The police returned the fire and killed one Irishman, wounded another and arrested a dozen.

London, April 3.—"Freeman's Journal" describes Lord Edmund Talbot, the new Viceroy, as "a rabid Tory partisan, and principal organiser of the anti-Irish forces in England."

Peking Teachers Send Ultimatum

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, March 31.—Following the announcement that the teachers' strike is nearing its end, owing to a statement from official circles that their demands are in process of being met, comes the news that they have issued an ultimatum to the Government, calling for a response not later than April 7th to the demands made. The ultimatum is said to be the result of the Premier's statement that a sum of $250,000 would be made available each month to meet the expenses of the Department of Education, and that the Minister of Finance would arrange for payment in installments of the arreared salaries, which is unsatisfactory to the teachers, since there is no definite assurance regarding the source of the monthly payments, nor the time when the expenses and the salaries in arrears will be paid. The demands of the teachers called for the immediate payment of all arrears of salaries and administrative expenses, and the guaranty of an appropriation insuring future educational expenditures.

Japs Threaten To Rule Vladivostok

(Reuter's Service)

Vladivostok, April 3.—In the course of a conversation here between M. Prokofeieff, President of the Popular Assembly, and General Tatchibana, the latter stated that the Japanese cannot allow armed inter-party conflicts such as the recent attempted rising, and in such cases must disarm both sides. He expressed the opinion that such occurrences were due to the absence of a democratic system of Government.

M. Prokofeieff pointed out that the Government had made repeated declarations, guaranteeing a democratic regime. General Tatchibana replied that these declarations and promises were not borne out in actual practice, adding that the prospective dismissal of the popular assembly might oblige the Japanese to take over the maintenance of civil order.

Chinese Legation In Rome Robbed

(Reuter's Service)

A London, April 3.—A message from Rome states that thieves visited the Chinese Legation last night and opened a case belonging to the Charge d'Affaires, Mr. Tang, which had contained a box of ancient jewelry, valued at a million lire, but that fortunately, the box had been removed to safe custody.

The thieves searched many rooms and stole several valises, hoping they might contain valuables, but abandoned them in the garden after opening them. The police think they will soon arrest the thieves.

7 By-Elections May Be Required

(Reuter's Service)

London, April 3.—In addition to those involved by the appointment of Captain Hon. F. E. Guest, Mr. Stanley Baldwin and Mr. F. G. Kelleway as Secretary of State for Air, President of the Board of Trade and Postmaster-General, respectively, the changes in the Cabinet will necessitate by-elections in the cases of Lord Edmund Talbot, who becomes Viceroy of Ireland, Lieut.-Colonel Sir John Gilmour, appointed Junior Extra Secretary of the Treasury, and Colonel G. A. Gibbs, appointed Treasurer of the Household. The number of the forthcoming by-elections may be increased to seven if, as is probable, Mr. Illingworth is raised to the peerage.

Local Mills Thank Koo For Defending Chinese Foodstuff

Code Cablegram Addressed To Minister To The Court Of St. James

In appreciation of the successful negotiation of Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo with the British Foreign Office on the test of Chinese wheat as being free from poisonous substance, the Chinese Flour Mills Association yesterday addressed a message to the new Chinese Minister to the Court of St. James.

The message reads:

"In view of the extensiveness of wheat cultivation in China and the growing importance of the Chinese flour industry as shown by the fact that the exports of Chinese flour to Europe alone have run to 500,000 tons a year at a value of several tens of millions of dollars, your recent negotiations with the British Foreign Office culminating in the Ministry of Food's testifying that the Chinese wheat is free from poisonous substances and entirely wholesome for food are gratefully appreciated and have resulted in further increase of the exports."

American Woman's Club Notes

One of the most important meetings of the year will be held by the American Woman's Club this afternoon when the annual election of officers takes place at the Carlton Cafe. Mrs. Percy Bryant, chairman of the Nominating Committee, will present a list of candidates which may be augmented by nominations from the floor. Tea will be served at four o'clock, the hostesses for the afternoon being Mrs. H. T. Sailor, Mrs. E. M. Vanbergen, and Mrs. B. A. Edwards, assisted by nine other members. There will be no program, the business session taking up the entire meeting.

All new members who joined the American Woman's Club since the beginning of last fall are invited to attend the reception to be given in their honor by Mrs. James Macbeth and other members of the Courtesies Committee at 170 Bubbling Well Road on April twelfth. Owing to the eccentricities of the Shanghai mails, it is possible that all will not receive cards, but such an omission does not mean that the invitation has not been extended.

The Social Service Department of the American Woman's Club will be given a share of the proceeds received next Friday night at the minstrel show to be held at the Navy Y.M.C.A. by the sailors of the U.S.S. Elcano. A share will also go to the Asiatic Branch of the Navy Relief Association, which cares for destitute relations of sailors and marines. The Social Welfare Department has held three "At Homes" at the Navy Y.M.C.A. since the beginning of the year.

* * *

The next meeting of the Mothers' Department will take place on Wednesday morning in the Carlton Cafe at 10:30 p.m. The topic "Hobbies," will be presented in a paper by Mrs. F. J. White of the Shanghai Baptist College, Mrs. W. W. Lockwood, Mrs. W. P. Strickland, and Mrs. L. E. McLachlin leading the discussion. Mrs. M. C. Guss will give a review of Freeman's "How Children Learn." Club members and their friends are invited to attend the session.

The Executive Committee of the Mothers' Department has been summoned for a special meeting to be held at the Carlton Cafe this afternoon at 4:00 p.m.

A party from the Literary Department of the American Woman's Club, has enjoyed a week in Hangchow, visiting points of historical and picturesque interests in this ancient capital of China. The days were filled with expeditions by boat or by riesha, to points of interest on and about West Lake, or to the temples and mountains beyond. Ideal weather was vouchsafed the party, and flowers bloomed luxuriantly.

Emperor's Island, with its remains of imperial splendor, overlooking the lake, was of historic associations. The peach and cherry trees were at the prime of bloom, and gave colorful setting to the terraced grounds with their carved pavilions rockeries and winding stairways. Three-lantern Island, lying like a tropical reefed emerald, was at its utmost beauty, the willow trees which enclose the lagoon being on the choice spring yellow-green. The reflection of these trees in the still lagoon leave a choice picture in memory. The causeways which intersect the lake, divided by picturesque bridges, must be seen, to be appreciated. A visit to the Liu Villa at the edge of the lake was much enjoyed by art-lovers. It shows a fine old Chinese home almost untouched by foreign influences, with impressive central courtyard, and carved furniture.

The longest trip into the hills was a day's visit to Liu Yin and Tien Tsoh temples, the Dragon-well tea gardens and the mountain peak above. It is the pilgrim season, and hundreds of pilgrims were upon the paths, dressed in bright blue garments. Many wore large yellow pockets suspended about their waists. Some were dressed in saffron—the sacred Buddhist color. Many of the pilgrims are elderly women, who trudge along on their tiny feet.

Beyond the Tien Tsoh temple the party climbed up to the tea gardens terraced up the hill side, and with a final scramble ascended the high peak beyond, from which a fine view of Hangchow and its environs is obtained, with the West Lake far below, like a map in silver, with causeways and islands enamelled in yellow-greens; guarded by the hoary pagodas—the needle at one end, the Thunder Peak at the other. Red azaleas cover the hill sides at this season.

The fitting climax to the week was furnished by a visit to the collection of Chinese antiques belonging to Mr. D. Mullen, Postal Commissioner for Chekiang. This comprises ivories and semi-precious stones, enamels and porcelains. Although but a portion of the collection is unpacked, the portion shown was so comprehensive, that one afternoon visit seemed wholly inadequate to give more than a passing glance.

The ivory carvings showed images of some fifty deities and notable of history; many of which are brown with age. One entire tusk is finely carved with the details of a well known story. Carvings in jade, carnelian, quartz and agate are of the Chien Lung period, while a few are of the ancient Han. A considerable number of Ming and Tsing enamels attracted attention of the admirers of this ware.

The principal collection is of porcelains. It comprises numerous examples of the wares characteristic to the Ming and early Tsing dynasties. Among these are especially good Kang Hsi blues. Two lanterns with scenes in the blue, are unique to this collection. The remarkable feature of the collection, however, is the great variety of porcelains from Tang, Sung and Yuen dynasties. Of the time anterior to Sung, are seen bowls and vases in rough glazes, in both monochrome and polychrome.

Of the Sung period examples are too varied to mention more than a few. Reminding one of the old Majolica ware, are Chin flower-pots with saucers, round and oblong, heavily glazed in raspberry red, or in violet blue with red transmutations. Of the sky-blue-after-rain are many examples. Some of which have splotches of copper red transmutations. Three glazes, not heretofore seen by the department members, are in heavy deep colored greens, browns and blues. Of the former an incense pot of Greek shape is evenly covered with a glaze shading from sage to a deep olive green, of exquisite tones. The brown is a true brown, very dark, almost black in places. In some objects it is mottled, in tortoise-shell effect, as upon one tripod vessel. This is reputed to be Ting ware, two bowls of the tortoise have white transmutation patches which are highly effective upon the rich brown glaze. The dark blues are similarly rich. An interesting group of brown bowls about seven inches in diameter, were used in the old tea drinking contests. One vase is reputed to be of the famous Ju Yao, marked Yao Hsing. It is large, of moonlight white, glaze of archaic shape, with bosses of animal heads and band of fret and has crab's claw markings and cornaline in the glaze, and sesamun seed markings on the base, another example of this almost fabulous ware is a small bottle shaped vase dove-colored with warm rose color running in the glaze. It shows the sesamun seed markings.

Examples of the White Ting ware, are here also. They include tripod vessels, square or round bulb bowls, eight lobed dishes and vases. This rare ware is carefully refined and finished, snow-white, translucent, and of charming designs, entirely undercorated.

A bowl of outstanding beauty is of fen-ting ware. It is a broad-shallow dish of creamy crackle, with a rich dual colored glaze on the rim trickling in heavy drops and scallops of green and brown, over the edges. This rim is some times protected by copper.

The arrangements for the party were made by Mrs. J. C. Oliver, and Mr. A. O. Oliver, who acted as guides. Mrs. G. C. Stockton attended to housing the party.

H. Y. Moh In Hankow To Organize Mills

(China Press Correspondence)

Hankow, March 30.—Mr. H. Y. Moh, the cotton magnate of Shanghai and owner of the greatest Chinese cotton mills in Shanghai and Chengchow, Honan, has been in Hankow since last Sunday, when he arrived from Shanghai at the request of the Hupeh Cottonmill Owners Association of Wuchang to help in the organisation of the latter.

About two weeks ago, the Wuchang cotton mill owners sent their new president Mr. Shu Yung-ting to Shanghai to straighten up some business with foreign firms. The cotton mill owners both in Wuchang and Shanghai seem to believe they will profit mutually by having some sort of union which will help them to take concerted action in determining marketprices.

During his visit in Hankow, Mr. Moh was royally entertained by prominent cotton merchants of Wuchang and Hankow. Mr. Moh will leave for Chengchow at the beginning of April on business connected with his new cotton mill there.

International Bank Opens New Building On Bund At Hankow

(China Press Correspondence)

Hankow, March 29.—A further indication of the growth of American trade in the commercial port of Hankow as well as of the rapid march of progress toward a modern city of Hankow city is furnished by the opening of the new six-storey building of the International Banking Corporation on the bund this morning. Regular business commences in the new building today, the old bank having been removed into the new one during the Easter holidays.

Just now only part of the building has been completed for the accommodation of the bank, while work upon the upper storeys of the commodious and imposing structure will not be finished until the month of June this year. Eventually the second and third floors will be equipped and let out to other firms as offices, and the bank's employes will have their living quarters on the fourth and fifth floors.

The whole ground floor is all nicely and artistically fixed up with the most up-to-date devices, and is also of the most pleasing design. The strong rooms are of enormous capacity and of the very latest type with triple doors specially supplied by the Diebold Safe and Lock Company of Canton, Ohio. The design of the whole building is the work of Messrs. Hemmings and Berkeley, engineers and architects of Hankow, that have recently gained distinction in winning the first prize offered by the Tientsin Municipal Council for the best design for their new municipal building.

THE TRADE MARK OF RELIABLE

OAK

IS THE BEST TOO GOOD FOR YOU?

No! And the sooner you realise that OAK is the one perfect wood for FLOORING, PANELLING, WAINSCOTING and all INTERIOR DECORATIONS, better.

The cost is not prohibitive, in fact it runs about the same as a first class carpet.

The arguments in favour of OAK are quite unanswerable; durability, cost, and last but by no means least, HYGIENE.

Insist that all lumber for flooring and panelling for interior work bears the "Three Pines" Trade Mark, and the letters "KD" signifying kiln-dried, thus ensuring its perfect quality, and suitability for the severe climatic conditions of China.

We give all orders personal attention. After you have placed your order with us, the flooring will be laid and all work carried out under the personal supervision of a foreign expert of the Company. We prefer to do this for you.

London, April 2.—A Lloyds' telegram from Seattle states that the West Hartland has arrived there in tow carrying the passengers and crew of the "Governor" which was sunk on March 31 as the result of a collision with the West Hartland. BANDMAN OPERA TO OPEN APRIL 18

The Bandman Opera company's advance man arrived in Shanghai yesterday with a program of London comedy successes, for the most part new to the East—a program that has been filling Bandman houses at Hongkong and Singapore to and beyond the "Standing Room Only" point.

The first night of this company's engagement at Hongkong brought out twice as many bids for seats as the Theater Royal could accommodate, and support has been unusually good ever since. The company, which is still playing at the Southern city, opens here April 18.

The Bandman's program, provides a new play for every Second night, including such hits as "Irene," "Bran Pie," "Oh Joy," "Buzz-Buzz," "Going Up," "Tails Up," "The Shop Girl," and "The Kiss Call," each of which has had long runs in London, and received the stamp of approval.

Thirty people comprise the Bandman company. They will arrive in Shanghai early next week, and will open at the Lyceum on Monday, April 18. It was originally intended to open here April 11, but so that there might be no confliction of dates with the Banyard company, now playing at the Olympic, the opening was set back one week.

Booking for the Bandman company's plays will open at Moutrie's next Monday. The company will continue at the Lyceum for two weeks or more.

The construction of the Victrola is so simple, the mechanism operates so accurately and smoothly, the materials and workmanship are of such high quality, that a Victrola seldom needs attention or adjustment.

This is one of the many reasons why you should be sure the instrument you get is a Victrola. Imitations possess neither the tone quality nor the lasting quality of the Victrola.

INDIA NOT TO SEND TEAM FOR OLYMPIC GAMES

Government Will Not Act In Aid Of Athletes For May Games In Shanghai

EQUIPMENT IS DONATED

Commercial Press Will Supply Material To Be Used; Navy In Cage Ball

The Government of India, expressing the view that athletics is a private matter, will not give financial assistance to athletes who would represent the country at the Far Eastern championships here next month and therefore India will not be represented.

The only possibility of Indian athletes coming here is upon action by the Young Men's Christian Association or the Indian Athletes Association at Poonha. The Government has referred the invitation to compete here to both organisations.

EQUIPMENT IS GIVEN

Along with a donation of $1,000 from the Tuchun of Chekiang yesterday came a gift to the China Contest Committee from the Commercial Press of all equipment to be used at the games. The Commercial Press will supply everything to be used from baseballs to standards for pole vaulting and the gift will probably mean between $1,000 and $1,500 to the Contest Committee.

CHINESE SAILORS ENTER

The third item of news cut loose yesterday from the Far East Olympic Games headquarters was the decision of the Chinese Navy to enter a team for the cage ball game against the Chinese Army. This will be a feature of the program for Thursday afternoon, June second. The Army has not yet been heard from but a team will probably be forthcoming.

CANADA BEATEN BY ENGLISH FIVE IN BASKETBALL

England Wins By Score Of 18-12 In International Series; Duffs Are Stars

England was again victorious in her third in the international basketball series played at the Chinese Y.M.C.A. Saturday night Canada going down to her in a keenly contested game, the final result of which showed a score of 18-12 in favor of England.

For Canada, the playing of Duff brothers was the outstanding feature and between them they registered all but two of the total points gained by their team. Westaway registered the other two points by a fine toss from the field.

The work of the forwards was more in evidence in the English team, the guards not being so hard pushed as was the case in the encounter with China.

MANY MEMBERS ARE ADDED TO BASEBALL CLUB

But "Committee Of 40" Will Probably Be Enlarged To Get More Action

While Secretary Woodrow Willson of the Shanghai Amateur Baseball Club has been bothered considerably by the "committee of forty" which is scouting for members for the organisation, returns have not come in as fast as expected and it is probable that the committee will be enlarged to 50 members.

Some of the men who were asked to gather ten dollar chits into the fold have fallen down on the job and will be asked to send back their block of IOU's for the Club does not desire anyone on the committee who is not willing to give some time to the campaign.

'Knocking' The Ball Into The Hole

BY ABE MITCHELL

When one remembers that almost half the strokes played during a round take place on the greens, putting assumes an importance that is not generally fully appreciated. One is certainly encouraged to take this view after watching players go up to their ball and in the most nonchalant manner, try to hole out. The professional is, of course, very much more careful. To him a missed putt is something much worse than a topped tee shot. In the one case, provided he is not too severely punished, he always has the chance to recover, but in the other the stroke has gone beyond recall. So we take every possible precaution against error, even to walking along the line of the putt to note the strength of the grass that may be thicker in one patch than another, or to remove any loose impediment. The professional never hurries over his putts. If he does, you can be sure he is suffering from nerves, for undue haste on the greens is a sure sign of nervousness. It is as if the player is anxious to get the shot over and know his fate as quickly as possible.

The best of putters are both studious and painstaking. Watch either Jack White or James Sherlock, who if a plebescite were taken would probably come out at the head of a putting honors list. They have disciplined themselves to a most exact system in which there is the suggestion of body movement and in which the club is swung with the smoothness of a clock pendulum. I know there have been several fine players who have swayed in a most obvious manner—the late Tow Ball was one of them, but in the case of these men I always think that putting is a subtle instinct with which they have been specially endowed. They must also have a fine sense of rhythm and tuning. For most players, however, accuracy only comes when the head and body are kept perfectly still.

ONE-TWO-THREE MOVEMENT

I was in the gallery at a Duncan match one day when I heard a spectator remark: "One-two-three. If I could only putt like that!" He was a well-known professional and he went on to declare that it was the only way to putt. It is the method which I practice myself, though not at the same speed as Duncan. From the moment the latter places his club behind the ball there is scarcely a pause in taking it over the ball and back again, and in striking. In my case there is a slight halt to separate the three moments and magnificent putter that he is. I sometimes think Duncan would make fewer mistakes if he took a little more time over the stroke.

The champion putts differently from most players inasmuch as he strikes the ball with the heel of the club, an old cleek which he found amongst the rubbish in his shop at Timperley a good many years ago and which he had cut down. The theory of this is that it carries out to some extent the principle of the center-shafted club as represented by the Schenectady. This implement, which is illegal according to St. Andrews ruling, is an American invention but its idea was borrowed from those shrewd old Scots of several generations ago. They were responsible for what is called "putting over the ball." The bow-shaped St. Andrews putters which can be seen today are proof of this. The idea of these clubs was that the extreme bend of the bow carried the eye in a straight line down to the ball. You cannot, of course, do this with an ordinary cleek type of putter. Duncan gets as near as possible to it by striking the ball off the heel.

HIT IT FIRMLY

I do not want to hold my putting style up as the perfect one, but I have my own views on this part of the game and here they are for what they are worth.

In the first place I do not believe in trying to coax the ball in the hole. My idea is that it should be knocked in, at any rate from all distances, say, up to four yards. Of course, in the case of long approach putts the club must be swung freely and carried right through. It is because the Amateur so often fails to do this that his ball finishes short of the hole. I always play to pass the hole, believing that it is a virtue rather than a defect to do so. If I were to play to coax the ball down I should always be afraid that it would leave the true line as it lost pace. Indeed, I am sure that it is very liable to do so when played in this manner.

Again it is because I advocate firm striking that I believe that the cleek type of putter which has a slight loft, is best. It may be a delusion, but those who use an aluminium club do not seem to well knock the ball. Also they do not appear to be able to exercise the same power of control. But there are few better putters than J. H. Taylor and he uses an aluminium club. He does not, perhaps, hole the long ones as frequently as some men, but round about the hole he is very deadly. Edward Ray is another expert with this type of club, but as in the case of Taylor he always suggests that he could hole out with anything. For such a big muscular man, Ray has a wonderfully delicate touch. The club rests gently in his hands and is swung with beautiful smoothness. By the way in putting Ray overlaps with two fingers of his right hand. This is a very common practice in America, the idea being that it confers greater authority on the right hand. Today, of course, most of us merely use the left hand for taking the club back. Mr. Hilton, I understand, has been experimenting for some time with the hands apart. By this means putting becomes still more a right hand affair. Mr. S. H. Fry, the billiard champion, has for many years putted in this style and amongst Amateurs he has always been conspicuous for his play on the greens.

No golfer has been subjected to more criticism than Harry Vardon for his putting and why he should be so uncertain in tackling the little shots round about the hole is a mystery that apparently has no solution. He has two distinct styles. In playing the long putt no one hits the ball nicer. The club is taken straight through and the ball runs on with splendid smoothness. Moreover there is no one who surpasses Vardon in judging the strength required with these shots. But when it comes to holding out he changes his style entirely. It seems as if he tightens every muscle. The result often is that he stabs the ball and cuts it off the line.

Just one other remark on the subject. I agree with Willie Park that it is not good to look at the line of a putt from both ends. By so doing you are only likely to be confused. Besides the line you want to find is the one you can see when you have taken up your stance.

The Kroewoek Java Plantations, Ltd.

Decreased output, increased costs, the passing of the yearly dividend because of the acute condition of the rubber market, and the need for conserving all possible resources, featured the report of the Kroewoek Java Plantations, Ltd., read at its annual meeting yesterday at the offices of its secretaries and general managers, Messrs. J. A. Wattie and Co., Ltd.

The estates, the report states, are in excellent condition, with the coffee plantation, almost ruined in 1919 by the eruption of the Kloet volcano, recovering well.

The directors' report gives the planted area of the estates, at 1,868 acres; Harvests: rubber 583,607 lbs. and coffee, 89 piculs, with estimates for the coming year, of rubber, 450,000 lbs, and Coffee, 800 piculs.

Yesterday's meeting was presided over by the chairman, Mr. A. J. Welch, with Messrs. J. H. McMichael, W. S. Jackson and H. M. Tibbery, directors, supporting. Twelve thousand and seventy-seven shares were represented. Resolutions were passed providing for the acceptance of the year's reports and accounts, for the re-election of Mr. W. S. Jackson to the directorate, and for the re-election of Messrs. Lowe, Bingham and Matthews as auditors.

The chairman, in his speech, said:

Gentlemen: "The report and accounts are compiled in the usual form, and, I think give a fairly comprehensive summary of the year's working.

"As you will have learned from the report the area under Hevea, with coffee interplanted, was increased by 5 acres during the year, these 5 acres were previously planted with Picus Elastica.

"The output of rubber fell short of the estimate by about 17,000 lbs., this was entirely due to the restrictions enforced during the concluding months of the year: had it not been necessary to curtail the output the estimate would have been considerably exceeded. Under normal conditions the output for 1921 would have been estimated at 650,000 lbs. but owing to the restrictions now in force it will be considerably less than this figure.

"The coffee crop was almost a complete failure, due to the fact that the trees had not sufficiently recovered from the effects of the eruption of the Kloet Volcano in May 1919 to bear a proper crop in 1920. They are now reported to be in first class condition again and the crop for 1921 is estimated at 800 piculs.

"The cost of producing our rubber was about 1¼ pence per pound higher than for 1919, this increase is entirely attributable to the fact that owing to competition from the neighboring sugar factories there was a pronounced shortage of labor throughout the year, which necessitated giving higher wages for all classes of work.

"The Year 1920 was the wettest year in the history of the company and the excessive rainfall did a lot of damage to the roads and watercourses as well as encouraging the growth of weeds but on the other hand the weather was very favorable for the formation of new branches on the trees that were damaged by the eruption of the Kloet.

"The health conditions were not as satisfactory as usual, due the visiting agent reports, to the natives underfeeding themselves on account of the high cost of foodstuffs, at the same time he states that the higher wages have had the effect of making them lazy and that if they had been willing to work as hard as they used to do they could easily have earned sufficient to feed themselves properly.

"If you will turn now to the Accounts you will see that the profit disclosed by the working account of the Dutch company is f.83,404.07 as compared with f.447,335.76 last year. This disappointing result is due to the extremely low price ruling for Rubber at the end of the year, the result of which was that, for the purposes of the accounts, the unsold stocks were valued at 30 cents per pound or say 6 pence.

"I feel sure that when sold the stocks will realise considerably more than the value placed upon them.

"Capital expenditure amounted to f.17,204.65, the details of which are given in the report. The only item that perhaps I should enlarge upon is the heading of machinery. Last year we installed an electric light plant for use in the factory from which current is also supplied to the manager's and assistant's bungalows. A small charge is made for the current used which is credited to the cost of the installation.

"The Accounts of the Shanghai company are quite straightforward and I do not see anything therein that requires special explanation.

"As regards the financial position of the company, you will see that the liquid assets of the Dutch company, that is to say stock, sundry debtors and cash, amount to Guilders 175,272.84 whilst the cash liabilities are f.63,699.12 so that the surplus of liquid assets of the Dutch company is f.111,573.72 or say the equivalent of about Taels 60,000. The Shanghai company has a surplus of liquid assets amounting to Taels 15,542.95 so that the total surplus of liquid assets at the end of the year was approximately Taels 75,000.

"In spite of this strong financial position, your directors feel that, as a large part of the surplus assets are represented by Unsold Stocks, it is not advisable at the present juncture to contemplate the payment of a dividend.

"It is impossible to determine how much longer the present acute depression in the rubber market is going to last and, in view of the fact that it is extremely difficult for rubber estates, no matter how sound they may be, to raise any money in case of emergency, your directors consider that your best interests will be served by conserving the company's financial resources in every possible way.

"The estates are now in splendid condition and ready to take advantage of any improvement that comes about in the rubber market.

"In conclusion, gentlemen, I feel sure that you will join with me in expressing our best thanks to the manager and staff and to the agents in Java for the very efficient manner in which they have administered the affairs of the estate during a most trying period."

Hupeh Industrial Bureau Planning Cotton Betterment

(China Press Correspondence)

Hankow, March 28.—The Industrial Bureau of Hupeh province has taken up a most important piece of work in the improvement of the quality of Chinese cotton. It has started an educational campaign among cotton cultivators in cotton districts in Hupeh on methods of planting American cotton. It is also intended by the Industrial Commissioner to impress on the farmers the importance of supplanting Chinese cotton seeds with American seeds in planting new crops each year.

For a few years past, American cotton seeds have been distributed to Chinese farmers through the Industrial office. In order to ascertain what progress has been made in adopting American cotton seeds in Chinese cotton fields, report forms have been sent out to magistrates, agricultural experiment stations and agricultural societies in the sixty-nine districts of Hupeh to gather information straight from farmers and others who receive American cotton seeds each year.

Recently a request has been received the Industrial office from the General Electric Company of the United States which desire statistics on electric light companies and other electric concerns in the district of Hankow.

Hankow, March 28.—The new modern office building of the General Chamber of Commerce of Hankow was dedicated last Saturday before a large and representative gathering including leading Chinese business men and representatives of the various trade guilds and clubs in Hankow.

The new edifice is of magnificence appropriate to the commercial port of Hankow whose increasing trade each year gives her the undisputed position of commercial metropolis of Interior China. The pleasing design of the building was supplied by Messrs. Hemmings and Berkeley, who recently gained the distinction of winning the first prize for the best design of the Tientsin municipal council.

Bernard Shaw Protests Point Raised In Divorce Heard By A Mixed Jury

Resents Insinuation That All Men Are Familiar With Abominable Things; His Sensibilities Delicate As Women's

London, Feb. 26.—England is acutely interested in the "Hughpot and Marypot" divorce case—so-called because wife and alleged co-respondent are cousins and called each other by those names from childhood—which has dragged on for a year, and now has been tried to a disagreement by a jury of six women and six men, the first time in English history that women jurors have ever sat in a case involving delicate questions. During the trial Sir Edward Marshall Hall, one of counsel, averred that he could not say what he thought because of the presence of women, and hesitated to offer certain indelicate letters in evidence. This has moved George Bernard Shaw to the following:

BY GEORGE BERNARD SHOW

As a member of the male sex I protest indignantly against the proceedings in the case before the Divorce Court.

The jury consisted of six men, married and unmarried, of various taxpaying ages, and six women, married and unmarried, of various taxpaying ages.

The case began with a discussion between the Bench and the Bar as to the effect on the jury of certain love letters described as abominable and beastly, and certain presumably obscene postal cards.

The conclusion arrived at seems to have been that as all men are familiar with abominable and beastly letters and obscene picture cards, they should examine these documents and tell the innocent women what they thought of them.

Now, I am a married man in my sixty-fifth year, and I solemnly protest that I am entirely guiltless of this alleged male habit of reading abominable and beastly letters and gloating over pornographic pictures.

Sir Edward Marshall Hall's assumption that my sensibilities in this matter are less delicate than those of women is not only unfounded, but extremely offensive. It was part of his case that these "exhibits" had passed between a man and a woman. Then why in the name of common sense did this blushing barrister exclude the six jurymen from the apology which he thought it necessary to make for presenting them to the six jurywomen?

I need not emphasize the gross absurdity of referring Miss Lilian Barker (a noted London philanthropist and social worker, who was on the jury), whose extraordinary record as a welfare worker during the war, to say nothing of her present responsible employment (as head of a large welfare organisation) makes her judgment more valuable in any question of domestic morality than that of the whole British Bar and Bench, to the nearest juryman, possibly a bashful novice of twenty-two, for instruction as to what she should think of an improper picture.

But I declare that it is monstrous that any woman or any man having a public duty of this kind to perform should have his or her name published as having on such-and-such a day been engaged in the examination of "abominable and beastly" documents.

What would be said if hospital nurses could not assist at unmentionable operations—as they have to every day—without having their names published in connection with disgusting descriptions of their work? Why is the sense of decency which protects nurses and surgeons from such repulsive reports suspended in the case of jurymen and jurywomen?

If the letters which were published as passing in the case are fair samples of the "abominable and beastly" documents, I can say without fear of contradiction that nothing in the case was half so shocking as the unfortunate discussion with which it opened.

If the leaders of the Bar are really as sensitive as Mr. Silas Wegg, with his "Not before Mrs. Boffin, sir," then I suggest that it will be on the whole less socially inconvenient for them to change their profession, or confine themselves to Admiralty practice, than for Parliament to repeal the Act providing for women jurors in deference to their bashfulness.

It combines the efficiency of a "Grandfather" pendulum with a 4" case. 7. Variations due to atmospheric changes are reduced to a minimum because the centre of gravity is within an eighth of an inch of the centre of motion. 8. The pivots of the compound pendulum, rolling in their curved recess, cause the pendulum to describe a cycloidal arc. 9. It cannot get out of beat. 10. There are no keys to lose. 11. There are no springs to break. 12. The design of the escapement reduces friction to the minimum. 13. The clock itself is its own driving power. 14. It shows at a glance when it needs winding. 15. The driving force is constant. 16. The design lends itself to new varieties of artistic treatment. 17. It requires no oil. 18. "$100 Invested in the right place, at the right time, will earn as much as one man steadily employed"

— JAY GOULD.

Have you $100 or more to invest?

Read this Story!

SOME months ago seven responsible business men familiar with oil ventures saw an opportunity in oil so far removed from speculative risks as to be far more of a legitimate investment than a gamble.

They knew of oil in the State of Wyoming, in the Big Piney-La Barge field, that is the equal of the finest Pennsylvania crude found only in Tiona, Pa. This oil runs from 45% to 50% gasoline. The gasoline and kerosene combined runs to 80%. In fact the crude oil is used in motor cars and trucks on the field when gasoline is unobtainable.

They made a thorough investigation on the field and found out that: (a) there were oil wells of 200 to 300 barrels a day capped and waiting for either a refinery or a pipe line; (b) no pipe line was being planned and none would go in until a 10,000 barrel well was produced; (c) gasoline was being brought in from distant points for use on the field and in neighboring towns; (d) even if a pipe line were put in the demand for the products of a refinery would be increased rather than diminished: (e) and finally that with the railroad at Kimmerer, 45 miles away, and constant truck traffic back and forth, there were easy transportation facilities.

The logical conclusion was the formation of a company to erect and operate a refinery, and in order not to limit the activities of the company provision was also made for oil drilling.

There were seven wells with a minimum capacity of 200 barrels a day each capped and waiting. It was first decided to operate an 800 barrels a day refinery using oil fram these wells. But in order to eliminate as far as possible the element of speculation, the company decided to commence operations with a 300 barrels a day refinery capable of being enlarged by additional units as needed, for the reason that the product of at least 300 barrels a day could be sold in the immediate neighborhood or within a radius of 50 miles. Contracts were accordingly signed with the well owners for these requirements.

The site selected for the refinery is 45 miles from Kimmerer and bids fair to be in the heart of one of the most promising oil fields in America. Among the companies drilling or preparing to drill in the immediate neighborhood are the Associated Oil, the Du Ponts, the Shell, and some 60 smaller companies.

Naturally if the company could own its own wells and refine its own oil the profits from the refinery would be just that much larger than if it had to continue to buy its oil.

Accordingly valuable leases on neighboring lands were obtained to the extent of 1,933 acres. Of these, 40 acres are proven land, that is, oil is being produced on three sides leaving little doubt that the 40 acres are actual oil land. To obtain these carefully selected leases was not easy. After considerable negotiation the owners consented to exchange their holdings for stock in the company.

This completed the preliminaries. The seven men who organised the company are now the Board of Directors of American Producers & Refiners, Inc. The company has purchased the refinery which is now in California or en route to the field. The contracts for the oil have been settled. The leases on the oil lands have been settled.

At present, the company is offering to the public 100,000 shares of guaranteed stock of a par value of $1.00 Gold. This $100,000 will be used in the erection and operation of the refinery which should be in operation by July or August. A conservative estimate of earnings shows that the refinery should pay a dividend of about 80%. Taking an extreme estimate, the earnings should not fall below 30%.

In order to give outside investors every chance of protection, no dividends will be paid holders of other stock until holders of this guaranteed stock have received dollar for dollar on their investment or a dividend of 100%.

The directors of the company are so convinced of the soundness of their plans that they are giving their own time and money to the disposal of this stock, and are not asking any other stockholders to help bear this expense.

Mr. Charles H. Raven, Vice President of the Company, is now visiting relatives in Shanghai and is prepared to explain the proposition in detail to all who are interested. "What may be a pure gamble if you do not know what you are doing may prove upon investigation to be a legitimate investment."

You are invited to make the most thorough investigation.

Level headed business men have made their investigations and have put in their ten times $100.00 and more. You have the same chance to investigate. Why don't you!

Now as to the possible earnings from striking an oil well .....But that's another story.

Call on Mr. RAVEN, or ask him to call on you!

Officer Punished For Giving A Geisha Imperial Smokes

Major General Takayanagi, Chief Of Staff In Vladivostok, Relieved Of Command For Giving Away Gift From The Emperor

Major General Takayanagi, Chief of the General Staff of Japanese Expeditionary Forces in Vladivostok, has been placed on the waiting list because of his gift of cigarettes to a geisha girl in Vladivostok, according to the Japanese papers. Several days ago Miss Kosomie, a Japanese geisha girl in Vladivostok, arrived at Tsuruga with a box of cigarettes on which the Imperial crest of chrysanthemum was printed. This aroused the suspicion of the custom officers and on examination it was found that she received them from the staff officer of the Japanese army in Vladivostok, the cigarettes being given by H.I.M. the Emperor to officers of the expeditionary forces.

When Major General Takayanagi returned to Japan, he was interviewed by a reporter of the Yomiuri and said that he gave the cigarettes to the geisha in congratulation of her retirement from the profession a short time ago. It is a custom, he said, that the articles given by the Emperor are distributed among the relatives and the friends of the receivers in appreciation of the kindness of the Emperor, and that it was as an ordinary lady and not as a geisha that she received the cigarettes.

"But," he continues, "it is to my deep regret that my conduct gave rise to the outcry against the loose morality and the irregularities of Japanese officers in Siberia, for which I will be submitted to due punishment of the community as well as the disposition of the authorities."

A certain officer of the army commenting on the conduct of Major General Takayanagi said that his gift is an inexecusable misdemeanor as a high officer of the army and he had been anticipating the official announcement of the waiting orders of the chief staff officer. Much indignation is felt by military circles in Tokio. As an individual, says an officer of the War Office, Mr. Takayanagi is a good man of a character bold and rather careless which gave rise to such an irrevocable failure in his military career, which deserves more severe punishment than mere waiting orders.

According to a statement of a sister of the geisha in question, who lives in Osaka, her sister forced the Major General to give her 100 cigarettes during a banquet in Vladivostok when he was intoxicated.

Major General Takayanagi is a prominent expert of Russian affairs. Major General Isomura will succeed him at Vladivostok.

FRENCH ADMIRAL TELLS WHERE THE U. BOAT FAILED

Could Not Secure Safety For Its Own Shipping, Says Daveluy

BY ADMIRAL DAVELUY

(The Admiral Mahon Of The French Army)

Paris, Feb. 10.—The destructive power of submarines asserted itself during the war so forcibly that nobody doubts their usefulness, and as the battleships which were attacked by them were unable to resist them, people who like radical solutions arrived at the conclusions that fleets must no longer include any vessels but submarines.

But the destruction of the enemy's shipping, which was one of the chief achievements of the submarine, is only one part of the navy's duties in time of war. It is not enough to sink the opponent's ships; one must also be sure of being in a position to secure the use of the sea for one's own shipping.

And that is just what submarines were unable to do.

While during the month of April, 1917, enemy submarines sank more than 800,000 Allied tons, and were jeopardising the revictualling of the Allied armies, Germany was unable to risk at sea a single surface ship in order to communicate with her Colonies and trade with them and with neutral countries.

SURFACE SHIPS REQUIRED

Therefore, the submarine, while it scored most important successes, fulfilled only part of the duties that fall to a navy in war, and it was the surface fleet which prevented the Germans from showing their flag.

If the above deductions are right, the first conclusion to be drawn is that not only submarines are required but also surface ships, which alone are in a position to prevent the enemy from using the sea.

But will that surface fleet include units siuilar to those which took part in the last war? This is quite a different question.

It does not follow that because the "Grand Fleet" was useful, even indispensable, its efficiency was perfect. The ships which it included proved defective. They were built to resist shells, but they were poorly protected against torpedoes. They were capable of sinking other battleships, but they were not equipped to sink submarines which attacked them.

Now, it is a truism to assert that warships must be able to resist blows aimed at them and to sink their opponents. In the presence of submarines the fleet ships will have to be armed with special weapons to flood the sea with bombs or depth-charges in of the last war fulfilled none of those conditions.

MUST PROTECT IT BELOW

From that indisputable fact the second conclusion follows, that the surface fleet of the future will have to be protected below water against the torpedo as well as above water against the gun. Its order to sink the submarines which will attack them.

The first of these two conditions would probably lead to the construction of ships of very great beam and small draught. We must look forward to a beam of from 160 feet to 200 feet, and draught of from 12 feet to 16 feet. This would involve the adoption of an entirely new type of ship.

Such a ship may seem paradoxical, but in reality the difference between it and the present dreadnought would not be greater than that between the dreadnought and the old two-deckers.

To sum up, there must be submarines, but also a surface fleet as well in order to drive the enemy from the seas. The surface fleet must include units the characteristics of which will be protection against the torpedo and armament capable of sinking submarines.

CHINA OR JAPAN MAY SEE WOOLEN COMPANY BUILD

Representative Of American Company Is In Japan To Look Situation Over

The American Woolen Company will build a factory for the making of woolen cloth in either Japan or China within the next year, it was learned in Yokohama, following the arrival now on the Empress of Russia of Mr. Edward M. Almeida from New York. Mr. Almeida, who is connected with the company, has been sent to Japan to investigate conditions. From there he will come to Shanghai to investigate possibilities in China also.

The proposed factory will be built in the Far East to escape the high wages paid labor in the United States. At present the firm is doubtful which of the two countries will furnish the best location, but China is thought to have a slight advantage over Japan. The wages in China are lower than in Japan, but the tariff on imported wool in China is higher. This necessitates a thorough investigation by the company's representative. He expects to work in and near Tokio for three or four weeks.

The American Woolen Company is said to control most of the wool produced in Australia, and the Far Eastern factory will be built to convert this into cloth. There is as yet no indication of the city in which the factory will be located in case it is built in Japan.

It is understood that the company plans the expenditure of several million dollars in building the plant, all capital to be furnished from America. The American Woolen Company is capitalised at a hundred million dollars. According to its financial statement for 1920 the profits amounted to $6,855,259 and the surplus was $31,508,732.

When interviewed Mr. Almeida was reluctant to make public any of his firm's plans, saying that the reason for building in the Orient was that they had "vision." He is accompanied by Mrs. Almeida and his sister-in-law, Mrs. O. B. Kendall. They are guests at the Imperial Hotel, Tokio.

FANCY SILK GOODS GROW SLUGGISH IN JAPAN MARKET

Temporary Steadying Demand From Canada And U. S. Unstable

Tokio, March 27.—Fancy silk fabrics, which have displayed a sign of steadying are once more sluggish. The relapse is general. Even pongee and georgette are in their heavy mood.

Often times fancy fabrics are in demand from abroad and a sign of activity is noticed, but the demand is always fitful and temporary. Therefore, their market is very much unsettled and irregular. Georgette crepes have been steadying for some time past, for instance, as Canada has resumed inquiring for the fancy fabric and some of her inquiries have developed into business. This has scarcely encouraged the silk textile market, for now that tissue is growing heavier again. Holders complain that Canada's demand is not steadily kept up.

Pongee, which has been receding from its height for the past few days, is now positively weaker. Yesterday's report from Yokohama stated that holders at Fukui, having been alarmed at the changed condition of their market, were anxious to get rid of their cargo. Although pongee was quoted at Y.8.80 at Fukui yesterday, spot goods were obtainable at Y.8.40. Buying for the United States, which stimulated the market to new activity recently, failed to be steady and permanent and is now very small. Ordinary crepes are still inquired for by Canada, Australia and some other parts, but these inquiries are petty. They are believed by some in the market to be only buyers' feelers. The possible buyers' quotations are 70 to 80 sen below holders' quotations and it is believed that they can not be developed into business with ease.

Yesterday the habutai market was much heavier. Weavers, having found their operations more unprofitable as a result of the upkeep of the price of raw silk and of the lowness of habutai's prices, have cut down production. The quality of their products is also much lower. Accordingly, buyers are discouraged and keep aloof. Yesterday trading was much poorer. In Yokohama the market was almost in a holiday mood. The price was unaltered and stagnant.

HAD A HARD TIME GETTING HER TEETH

UNTIL THE DOCTOR RECOMMENDED BABY'S OWN TABLETS.

Many mothers endure agonies of mind when seeing their babies suffer the tortures of teething. Yet neither mother nor child need go through such misery, as many parents have proved, among them Mrs. David Lee, of Lindsay, Ontario, who writes:—

"My little girl had a hard time getting her teeth. She was quite feverish; her tongue was coated, her breath offensive, and she vomited curdled milk.

"On the advice of our doctor I gave her Baby's Own Tablets and she began improving at once. She had not slept well at nights for about three months, and I was almost worn out caring for her. Now her food digests properly, her breath is sweet, her tongue clean and she is quiet and good. I can strongly recommend the Tablets to other mothers as they did my baby good when nothing else did."

Baby's Own Tablets, the Canadian children's remedy, are obtainable from chemists, or post free, 60 cents the vial from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

ELECTRICAL APPARATUS FOR EVERY PURPOSE

This trade mark is the guarantee of dependable electrical equipment.

This space will show weekly a new aspect of one of the great industrial institutions of the world.

Where the Light Comes From

A modern miracle! One after another a million points of light spring into being until the whole city is radiant with an illumination second only to that of the sun itself.

From the bulb of the lamp back to the original source of power there is no machine that does not owe something of its past development and present perfection to Westinghouse Electric.

For Westinghouse Electric makes the transforming apparatus by which the electric current is raised to the tremendous voltage—which is necessary for its transmission over great distances, and reduced again to the low voltage at which it is translated into light.

It makes the great generators in the Central Station in which the current had its birth.

It makes the marvelously efficient steam turbines that drive its generators.

It makes the automatic stokers, feeding coal under the boilers that save human labor and assure better combustion

Every step of the long evolution—stoker, turbine, generator, alternating current, and transformer—represents a distinct Westinghouse contribution to the great result—light in a dark house for the greatest possible number of people at the lowest possible cost.

KINGMAN & BROS.

How to Preserve the Teeth

In order to keep the teeth in a good condition scientific precaution must be taken. Through negligence, decay and numerous other affections such as tooth-ache, dental periostitis esteo-periostitis, necrosis of the jaw, etc., may arise. During the process of ingestion, there are settled on the teeth, some deposits of mineral and organic matters, called tartar, which possesses a morbid power of pressing the gum. As an inevitable result of the presence of this tartar, the teeth will become elongated and movable and will, by degrees, absorb away the enamel, leading ultimately to the decay and degeneration of the teeth. The tartar is so hard and resistant to the process of brushing that it cannot be scraped off except with dental instruments specially devised for that purpose.

Dr. KINGMAN offers to the public his service for preserving their teeth at an annual subscription Fee of $10.00 per head to be paid in advance.

The work to be done by Dr. KINGMAN to the subscribers consists in:—

(1) Cleaning of the teeth quarterly
(2) Filing with gold platinum alloy only, when the teeth present holes.
(3) Inspecting the teeth at any time at the desire of the subscribers.

Since our last report the London market has fluctuated to a certain extent, and early this week reports of a sharp rise in London came to hand.

At today's auction, however, buyers were rather reserved, the bidding was rather slow and altogether there was only a moderate demand.

Standard Ribbed Smoked Sheet sold up to 32½ cents which show an improvement of 1 cent.

Off Quality Sheet was wanted at an advance of 1 cent.

Standard 1st Latex Crepe dropped about 2½ cents. Only two lots of this grade changed hands, fetching above-mentioned prices; these lots were not awarded.

Off Color Latex found buyers at a decline of 2 cents.

Fine Brown advanced 1 cent.

Brown, Dark and Barky Crepes maintained on an average last week's prices.

In the afternoon one lot of Standard Sheet was sold at 31½ cents, and the tendency at the close was easy.

N.B.—The above prices for Standard Quality Sheet and Crepe are only paid for small lots at the auctions, whereas bigger quantities in the outside market generally fetch from 1 cent to 1½ above these figures.

To Argue Libel Demurrers Friday

Arguments will be made by Attorneys Linebarger and Davies, for Messrs. Patrick Gallagher, and George Bronson Rea, respectively, in the United States Court for China, Friday at 9:30 a.m., on the two defendants' demurrers filed recently in answer to the petition of Mr. George L. Shaw, of Antung, who is suing for $100,000 damages alleged to have been sustained as the result of the publication of an article in the Far Eastern Review. The demurrers maintained that the petition was not sufficiently specific in its terms to warrant legal action.

Germany's Three Strata

Three great classes, each striving for increased recognition, are described in this new presentation of the internal factors controlling Germany's future. Its title is "Social and Political Conditions in Germany," an address delivered by the editor of The Baltimore Sun to the Council on Foreign relations in New York:

BY RICHARD F. CARY

Political tendencies within Germany are of fundamental importance, since from them will result a new series of international relations. But they must be discussed in connection with the conditions under which Germans are now living, for they are frequently influenced more directly by these conditions than they are by abstract political ideas or by the pressure of the Versailles Treaty. To state the situation broadly, the party which seems to promise the most feasible policy of economic rehabilitation is apt to secure support from the voters, regardless of its stand on other subjects; and the ability of the Government is measured, to a considerable degree, by the improvement or retrogression of the economic situation. This standard of measurement is not unusual in America, and its use in Germany at the present time will not excite surprise. The fact that it is used is of extreme importance.

It is proper to describe the viewpoint of the average German; but there is no average German. The mass of the population, excluding the wealthy and well-to-do, must be regarded as split into three great categories—the office workers (Mittelstand), the shop workers and their like, and the farmers. These three groups have different outlooks on life because of differences in their viewpoints and in their abilities to procure necessities. The farmers, of course, take their toll of the food they produce, and are the healthiest of the lot; the manual workers have exerted their strength through their unions to secure additional wages as the cost of living increased; but office workers, minor officials and members of the professions are hard pinched.

The last group presents an extreme anomaly. Its members are neatly dressed, their children are not below the average in physical well being and their homes suggest a high standard of living; but they are poor. The explanation is simple and lies in the morale and intelligence of these people. They practice every possible economy which does not involve sacrificing their appearance of respectability, and they undergo astonishing deprivations, but they manage to feed their children after a fashion. This Mittelstand receives occasional mention by those who are familiar with conditions in Germany, but it is not usually supposed to deserve much consideration in connection with discussions of Germany's future, for the reason that it has no direct means of expressing itself. It lacks the power of the labor unions. But it is inclinded, hereditarily, to cast a conservative vote in the elections, and this fact is significant.

FOR MORE INFLATION

The farmers have, until recently, been more or less content. Although they were forced to work hard during the war and to accept losses because lack of fertiliser diminished the productivity of their lands, they were able to obtain high prices for their crops and to benefit thereby. The debased currency inflicted suffering on those who derived their support from fixed incomes; but the farmer who was not able, any more than the townspeople, to buy clothes or supplies, could buy land—that is, take up his mortgage—absolutely at pre-war prices. But lately he has joined the ranks of the dissatisfied, for he must have goods without delay, and the industries of Germany are not able to supply them to him. He does not object to work, but he does object to working for insufficient wages; and he will consider wages insufficient until with them he can purchase what he needs. Rather shortsightedly, his plea is for more money. To grant it would be to inflate the national currency beyond all conceivable bounds; and the farmer would inevitably lose out, for prices of imported goods would rise faster than his income. The solution of his problem lies in the rehabilitation of industry, although it is hard to persuade him of this.

It is the German laborer who, generally and properly, has the center of the stage. His wages have risen enormously, even if they have not kept up with the cost of living, and his power within the nation has also been increased. The Government has treated him with perhaps as much respect as was possible. Insurance benefits have been adjusted to correct in some degree the decrease in value of the mark; various industries have supplied him with extra food in order that his physical stamina may be maintained; educational systems have been revised in his interest; and the unions have been allowed to add their representatives to governmental bodies and to participate in the management of industry. It is not strange that the workman feels a new spirit of independence and equality. He has tested class-union pragmatically and has found it to be a powerful weapon. For example, the general strike of last March showed the strength of the organised workers against the treat of military control; and their resistance to Kapp and Luttwitz was not less effective because of the indifference or mild approval of the Mittelstand. It was perhaps to avoid taking issue unnecessarily with this class of the population that Marshal Foch recently proposed an advance toward Bavaria instead of into the industrial district of the Ruhr.

From this brief description of the character and temper of the three great groups, it is easy to guess what they think of each other and what attitude they assume in politics. There is real friction between town and country. The city dwellers resent the fact that the farmers are well fed although food is scarce, while the farmers are disgusted because the cities will not furnish them supplies. Of course, the scarcity of supplies also hits the industrial laborer; and it is so extreme as to justify the comment of a prominent German economist that the so-called struggle between capital and labor is actually a struggle between the producer and the consumer. The attempts of the labor groups to participate in management are obviously because they hope thereby to gain a larger share of the goods produced.

RADICALS NOT IN CONTROL

The farmers distrust labor in its new role and are apt to consider its program the cause rather than the result of the present shortage of manufactured products. Partly on this account, the militarists who, in March, tried to seize the Government hoped that the agricultural districts would support them; and this hope was not without foundation. Within the cities, too, there is lack of unity, for the white-collared folk have much the same opinion as the farmers of the policies of the labor unions.

It is on the laborers, however, that the hopes of a democratic Germany largely rest. Not that the other groups fall short in idealism; but they have no gains to offset their bitter regret that the prosperous days of monarchy have passed away. Trained to revere the classes above them and to regard them as the authors of prosperity, even the most liberal members of the Mittelstand must wonder what good can come out of socialism. This doubt is justifiable; but, as a matter of fact, recent changes in the machinery of government do not mark a great advance in the direction of socialism, except on paper. There is a general feeling that German industry cannot promptly recover unless its competent leaders are allowed to retain control; and it can be fairly stated that the workmen hold this same theory and consequently have not interfered in any marked way with the management of important industrial concerns.

It is proper to recall the results of last June's elections as showing the trend of political thought. At this time the two people's parties showed an increase in strength in spite of the fact that they are conservative and contain certain manarchist and militarist elements. This gain, at the expense of the liberal parties, may be interpreted as due to claims that the Right is led by trained and capable men who can solve Germany's internal and international problems. The experience of the country during the preceding eighteen months had shown conclusively that the liberal parties could not, and it was easy for the conservatives to claim that incompetence was the cause of their opponents' failure. To this must be added the political skill of the parties of the Right, which far surpassed that of the plebeian liberals.

In spite of the theory that the present Government, because of the participation of the people's parties, is to provide a "practical" administration, it must not be forgotten that the ineffective revolution of last March started from the Right and that it would have been more or less successful if the Left had not taken its decided stand. It is also true that the extreme Right believes that Germany needs a standing army, while the Left denies this contention. Here is, then, a dilemma—the Right is shot through with streaks of old-time militarism and class authority, but is "practical," and the moderate Left is pacifist and democratic, but flirts with socialism. Is it possible for Germany to reach a position of equilibrium as between these two tendencies?

The answer to this question can be made unhesitatingly in the affirmative. The Mittelstand is not unanimous in support of the Right. Liberal ideas have their hold in this group, for the Democratic and Social Democratic Parties and the Center all find adherents in it. The farmers have the conservatism of all landowners, but they are not fundamentally militaristic and they will lose their distrust of the moderate liberals as economic conditions improve. It appears, therefore, that even the extreme Right may easily avoid developing the stubborn and autocratic spirit of Postdam, for it is not able to derive power except from the votes. One cannot describe in a brief space the importance of the change from the ingenious suffrage schemes of the past to the present system of universal suffrage, but it lies just here, in the necessity which each party must face of appealing to the people. There is a new idea in Germany, the idea of government by the people, and one proof that this idea will prevail may be found in the moderate stand of the labor groups, who have shown so few signs of assuming dictatorial powers. The political problems of Germany center around the need of food, or, more properly, the necessity of resuscitating her industry, and the moderate Left is willing to accept battle on this ground with constitutional weapons. It is not, therefore, impossible to hope that Germany may pursue an orderly career of political development in spite of disturbing factors, which, because of their relative unimportance, have not been mentioned. And there is actually reason, also, to hope that the liberal elements in her political life will be able, through their insistence on the folly of militarism, to insure that the future Germany will not threaten the peace of the world.

Fleet Concentration In The Pacific—Disarmament Must Be All Round—An Anglo-American Naval Rapprochement—Cancel The 21 Demands

(Translations by The Japan Advertiser)

Yomiuri: Since the Panama Canal was dug the relative merits of the division of the American fleet in the Atlantic and the Pacific and of its concentration in the Pacific have been discussed by naval experts from time to time, and their opinion has generally been in favor of concentration. That the execution of this step has so far been put off was due exclusively to international relations, and in consequence there are many reasons why we should pay great attention from the standpoint of international politics to the fact that America now proposes to make the concentration of her fleet in the Pacific her permanent naval policy.

In the first place, there is almost no possible danger of war between Great Britain and America, and it is no longer necessary for the latter to maintain a navy with Great Britain as a hypothetical target. There are not wanting at present national friction in sentiment and causes of serious disputes between Great Britain and America, but judging by their interests involved, it is inconceivable that they should go to war on that score. Great Britain could not be expected to join Japan against America should war occur between Japan and America, no matter whether a general treaty of arbitration exists or not or whatever construction may be put on the provisions of the Peace Commission Treaty.

Secondly, there is an urgent need of fortifying the Pacific. Whether war between Japan and America is possible or can be prevented, America has of late almost feverishly been trying to fortify herself against Japan. The object of the tour of General Wood is not merely to study the question of the independence of the Philippines and inspect administrative affairs, as is declared, but there is sufficient reason to believe that one of his most important objects is to make close investigations regarding the fortification of the Pacific. His inspection will perhaps result in the completion of fortifications on Hawaii, especially in Pearl Bay and Kennethe Bay, (sic) which is regarded by America as a key to the Pacific. If the equipment at those strategic points is completed, they can more than sufficiently accommodate and shelter the whole of the American fleet. Above all, a large coal and oil depot may be established at Oahu as a rear station for the navy with Guam as an outpost so that the nozzle of the gun can be directed against Japan. It may be expected that at least something like this equipment will result from General Wood's tour of inspection through the Philippines.

Thirdly, the strategic value of the Panama Canal has changed. It certainly formed a natural bulwark for America at the time when there was no air warfare, but in these days, if an enemy country associated itself with a country on the west coast of South America, and acquiring a base of aerial operations there and attacked the Panama Canal, its fate could well be imagined. It is perhaps natural that the policy of dividing the navy in two oceans should be changed to that of concentration in the Pacific, and that steps should be taken to be prepared in the Far East and on the west coast of South America.

Lastly, the diplomatic policy which will be pursued by America in the Far East with a concentrated navy in the Pacific at her back calls for attention. According to foreign dispatches, America will abandon the vague policy represented by the Ishii-Lansing Agreement, and taking the view that by recognising Japan's special interests in Asia, she has encouraged Japan's Imperialism and weakened China's sovereignty, she will try to return to her traditional policy of the open door in China. For the present moment let us simply say that the Ishii-Lansing Agreement does not lead to any vague policy, that the charge that it has encouraged Japan's Imperialism and weakened China's sovereignty is entirely unfounded, and that we are in no way behind America in hoping for the preservation of the principle of the open door in China. As for the future, let us closely watch the development of American diplomacy.

UNIVERSAL DISARMAMENT

Chugai Shogyo: The American authorities strongly deny the report that the American Government has decided to concentrate the navy in the Pacific, but it is not impossible that the mere fact that the rumor is strongly denied may be taken as showing that it is true. It has been watched with much interest what policy will be followed by President Harding and Mr. Hughes regarding Pacific problems. Though there are not yet any definite indications of their policy, can it not be assumed on the strength of Mr. Harding's utterances and the past claims of the Republicans that the new Administration will arrange for development more positively than its predecessor and pursue an active policy in the Pacific? It must be known, to the new Administration that future problems will occur in the direction of that ocean.

Almost simultaneously with the reported decision of America to concentrate her fleet in the Pacific, it is reported that a naval agreement has been reached between Great Britain and America. What connection is there between the two reports? In view of the fact that Great Britain has curtailed her naval expenditure and of the utterances of Lord Lee, there is comparatively great possibility of a naval agreement between Great Britain and America, and it is not necessarily difficult for them to conclude such an agreement. America may not have decided on the concentration of her fleet in the Pacific, as is officially said, but there seems no doubt that such arrangement will be realised sooner or later.

If negotiations are proposed for a disarmament agreement between Japan, Great Britain, and America, we shall be ready to entertain the proposal, but if Great Britain and America conclude an agreement between themselves, excluding Japan, and when America has concentrated her fleet in the Pacific, how will

How Days Become Longer After Winter Solstice And Shorter After Summer—Days And Nights Equal At Equinoxes

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

Noted Astronomer And Writer On Subjects Of Popular Scientific Interest

"Please explain the manner in which the days grow longer and shorter," asks a reader. They begin to shorten after the Winter solstice, which occurs about December 22, when the sun is at its greatest declination south of the equator, and when it crosses the meridian at noon for us in the northern hemisphere at the lowest elevation that it has in the whole year.

After the Winter solstice as the sun begins to move northward the days begin to lengthen, because the sun, being every day a little farther north, and consequently running a little higher above the southern horizon, remains proportionally longer in view between sunrise and sunset.

When the sun has risen to the plane of the equator, since its position in the sky is then halfway between the north and the south pole, it is just as long above the horizon as below it, and the days then are equal in length to the nights, twelve hours each, all over the world. That is called the vernal, or Spring, equinox, and occurs about March 21.

From that time on the days begin to grow longer than the nights, and continue to do until the Summer solstice, which occurs when the sun reaches its greatest declination north of the equator, about June 21. Thereafter the sun redescends southward, and the days shorten again until the next Winter solstice. At the Autumn equinox, about September 23, the days and nights are once more of equal length all over the world, as they were at the vernal equinox.

NOT A CONSTANT RATE

The rate at which the days lengthen and shorten is not constant. Near the solstices the change is less rapid than near the equinoxes. The amount by which they lengthen and shorten varies with the latitude of the place of observation, i. e., its distance from the equator.

Exactly on the circle of the equator the days never vary in length, the sun being always above the horizon twelve hours and below it twelve hours. This statement ignores the effect of atmospheric refraction, which tends to make the sun visible a short time after it has really set and an equally brief time before it has actually risen. This of course, always makes the daylight prevail slightly longer than the nocturnal darkness even on the equator.

If the earth's axis of rotation stood upright to the plane of its orbit around the sun—as some suppose that the axis of the planet Venus does—the days and nights would always be of equal length all over the globe, and, moreover, there would be no change of seasons.

That condition of things might suit some people. Generally speaking, heat and cold would then depend solely on latitude. But even the polar regions would not have such excesses of temperature as they have now.

If you want to understand exactly how the days lengthen and shorten to varying degrees in different latitude you will have to learn something about spherical trigonometry. That would make you feel good—more masterful; you would be independent of the almanac. Trigonometry is one of the mind's light dumbbell exercises that nobody should neglect who wants to be a good all-round specimen of developed humanity. It is also an excellent club to have in hand while traversing the dark highways of this world, so infested with ignorance and superstition.

You can perhaps perceive without much trigonometry that if the sun rises and sets at 6 o'clock for us when it is over the equator, it must rise before and set after 6 o'clock for us when it is north of the equator, and that the amount of the difference must be greater the farther we are north on the earth's surface until we get up to the arctic circle.

A LESSON IN TRIGONOMETRY

In other words, a short lap is added to the sun's visible course through the sky every day when it is north of the equator. What we need in order to tell how long the day will be at any time of the year and in any latitude is the length of that lap, for that time and that place.

Here is where spherical trigonometry comes to our aid. It offers us the means, which I shall not undertake to describe here, of calculating, in degrees, the length of the lap added to the sun's diurnal course before and after 6 o'clock. That lap is sometimes called the sun's ascensional difference. It is enough if we know its length at the morning end of the day.

A formula which will enable you to calculate the approximate length of the day is as follows: Multiply the tangent of the sun's declination by the tangent of your latitude and the result will be the sine of the sun's ascensional difference. This will, of course, be in degrees and minutes of arc. Turn it into apparent time by dividing by 15, which is the number of degrees corresponding to an hour and the number of minutes of arc corresponding to a minute of time, and the result will show how long before 6 o'clock the sun will rise, and how long after 6 it will set. That will give you the length of the day. For great accuracy you must make a small correction for atmospheric refraction.

Tangents and sines are joyful companions and perfect Arabian Night genii of power, and you can carry them in your pocket in a little book, as Aladdin carried his wonderful lamp in his bosom.

Japanese Press Comment

Pacific problems be dealt with in the future in circumstances under which even the question of the mandatory rule of Yap cannot be satisfactorily settled? How will Japan's national defence be menaced? These are grave problems which will demand attention in the near future. Such a state of affairs would be entirely contrary to the principle of peace and humanity which has been urged by America at all times. It would completely stultify the action of America in having tried to arrange naval disarmament between the Powers with the object of strengthening the foundations of the world's peace and of promoting the welfare of mankind.

While hoping that the people and authorities of this country will pay deep consideration to the above points, we wish the new Administration of America to reconsider its attitude.

CANCEL THE 21 DEMANDS

Tokio Asahi: According to a London Times dispatch, America will return to her traditional policy of the open door in China, and there is reason to believe that China will ask America's strong support in urging Japan to denounce the treaties arising from the Twenty-One Demands. Even when the situation is considered in the light of the past policy of the Republicans towards China and of China's attitude in playing off one country against another, we wonder whether those reports will not come true sooner or later. This is a very serious matter to Japan.

The Sino-Japanese treaties arising from the Twenty-One Demands are those relating to Shantung, South Manchuria and Eastern Inner Mongolia. The execution of the Shantung treaty is at a deadlock, as is well known. As to the other treaties, they have done no actual good except that the period of the leases for Port Arthur, Dairen, the South Manchuria Railway, and the Antung-Mukden Railway has been extended to 99 years. From the practical point of view, therefore, the cancellation of the Twenty-One Demands would not be so serious a question. Above all, the Chinese policy as conceived by the intelligent men of this country has changed since 1915 when those treaties were concluded. It is Japan's desire to keep the door open in China and to abolish spheres of influence in that country. If a revision of the Shantung, Manchurian, and Mongolian treaties is requested on proper conditions, it is not believed that the request will necessarily be rejected. But at the Paris Conference China carried on propaganda, and represented those treaties as invalid on the plea that they had been extorted by ultimatums. It is now reported that with the support of a certain country, China will compel Japan to cancel the treaties. We wonder whether such a policy is a wise one for China to follow.

The fact is that we have been awaiting an opportunity fundamentally to improve the relations of China and Japan. If the revision of treaties above mentioned can be made a preliminary to such improvement, it will serve a very useful purpose, and we need not wait for the intervention of a third country.

But the Chinese authorities should note these things. China should be completely unified, and a strong Government should be responsible for the negotiations. It should be noted how close are the relations between Japan and Manchuria owing to the Sino-Japanese and Russo-Japanese Wars. Allowance should also be made for the Sino-Japanese relations and the conditions in China at the time when the so-called Twenty-One Demands were presented. At the present moment the Peking Government is not able to take up diplomatic questions owing to the shake-up of the Chin Cabinet, and we pray that the time may come at the earliest possible moment when the Japanese and Chinese authorities will be able to conduct cordial negotiations for the settlement of the important questions now pending between Japan and China.

ARMY AND NAVY REDUCTION

Jiji: The reduction of naval estimates by Great Britain may rightly be regarded as a practical example of disarmament. In view of the fact that hitherto Great Britain has made any sacrifice to maintain its world's largest navy, her present action may be said to be a really great new departure. It is true that the necessity of economy is one of the reasons for the present action of Great Britain, but the fact should not be ignored that that necessity has been combined with the notion that disarmament is necessary for the preservation of the world's peace and for the promotion of human welfare. In America the advocates of disarmament are not yet so influential as in Great Britain, but they have an influence in practical politics that cannot be ignored, and the national opinion of America is being gradually aroused in favor of disarmament with the earnest and influential espousal of its cause by Mr. Borah and the influential exhortations of the World.

In Japan the eight-eight fleet program is one that was projected long ago, and is said to be the minimum unit for the defence of the country, but the value of armaments is relative, and it cannot necessarily be said that the program is absolutely necessary. If Great Britain and America reduce their armaments to a certain extent, Japan can also afford to make a proper modification of her prearranged program. Instead of waiting for the initiative to be taken by other countries, Japan should approach Great Britain and America with arrangements for world-wide disarmament. This again reminds us of the necessity of reducing the army. This can be done at the will of this country, it not being necessary for it to make allowance for the attitude of other countries. Such disarmament should be speedily carried out so that proof of Japan's intention to carry out disarmament generally can be presented to the world. From this point of view, we are persuaded of the urgent need of curtailing by one half the present number of Divisions.
